In a small town called Grapesville, lived a 'bunch' of little grapes.

The little grapes worked very hard every day, kept neat and tidy homes and took loving care of their beautiful gardens.

Long, long ago, a law was written in Grapesville which declared that grapes were not allowed to stay in the sunlight for longer than two hours a day.

The little grapes of Grapesville always obeyed this law without question.

The grapes believed that something could happen to them if they stayed outside in the sun for too long.
